

Freedom-Zine America

Published by The Cepia Club LLC
Our Community Reports

Issue # 28 June 9, 2009

www.cepiaclub.com

P.O. Box 214, Centuria, WI 54824

715-646-9933 www.cepiaclub.com

Visit the

Cepia Trade Bazaar (& Barter Club)

Located at Planet Supply (Below the US Post Office in St. Croix Falls, Wisconsin)

Fair Trade, Foreign Trade, Home Trade

Local Trade

Commerce Like It Should Be
Foods, books, apparel, dvds & more

Centuria, WI's Memory Days July 10th-12th 2009

Javier Trejo Headlines Centuria's July Memory Days Concerts

Javier Trejo Band, a nation-touring "rock-out" band from the Twin Cities, highlights Centuria, Wisconsin's Memory Days two day main street concert on Saturday, July 11th.

Hoping to leap over other community festivals in western Wisconsin's Polk County, the village of Centuria centers its "do-it-yourself" recession-economy recovery with a daring mix of diverse entertainment and "sustainable-market" renewal.

Most important to July's Memory Days, according to event volunteer, Tim Krenz, is the entertainment around a Friday night and an all-day Saturday concert-festival, July 10th and 11th.

"Javier is a phenomenal artist and performer. He is strongly connected to the local area through his family, friends, and concerts, and he is a talent getting big time in other parts of the country, based on his outstanding music and ability," said Krenz.

Javier Trejo Band, who play a "psychobilly" cowboy country-punk, outlaw rock and roll, is one of five local musical acts playing Memory Days. Other acts include Friday's entertainment, Medula Headrush, and Saturday's stellar line up of Sandy Bishop's Children's Variety Family Show, folk string and dance along by

The Juggernauts, and the psychedelia "funk-it" rock grunge of the area's own, Squib.

Centuria banks on bands drawing crowds to its foods, crafts, trades, professions and farmer's markets featured that big day, Saturday, July 11th. For more info about Centuria's July Memory Days, the concert-festival, or the low-fee vending booths, call the Village Hall at 715-646-2300.

Freedom-zine America
Copyright © 2009
The Cepia Club LLC
P.O. Box 214
Centuria, WI 54824
www.cepiaclub.com

All-Market Bazaar for Centuria's Memory Days

Centuria, Wisconsin, will host an "all-market bazaar" for its July 10th-12th Memory Days festival.

The village-wide sales and booths, including garage and yard sales, is open to out-of-town vendors for all manners of commercial crafts, trades, professions, hobbies, civic and social associations, non-profits, and farms and coops. Charging only $10 per day for prime spots in the downtown-area streets and sidewalks, or $30 for all three days, the village All-Market Bazaar seeks to create an authentic old style swap meet, where the diversity, variety and fun adds to the attraction.

The vending permits for concession foods on sale that weekend, while open to any licensed restaurant, civic group or social association, have been set at $50 for the big Saturday party, July 11th, coinciding with the music performances on Main/Fourth Street (off WI St. Hwy 35; just three miles north of US Hwy 8). Concession food vending permits for the entire weekend are $100.

"The big day is that Saturday, July 11th," said event volunteer Tim Krenz. "We have live performances and entertainments, including four music acts, beginning that morning at 9 AM.

Opening the commercial vending to bring more interest and more attraction will hopefully bring more people to enjoy what should be a memorable weekend festival."

The music groups referenced by Krenz include: Sandy Bishop's Children's Family Variety Show; local folk string band, The Juggernauts; Polk County's funk grunge favorites, Squib; and the Midwest's own rock & country stars, Javier Trejo Band, on national tours this year via the Twin Cities.

For more on vending opportunities or concession food permits, and Centuria's Memory Days, call the village office at 715-646-2300.

Cepia Club Launches New Television Show

St. Croix Valley
Liberty Beacons
Puts Club Further Into
"New Age" of Broadcasting

Cepiaclub.com, holding to its acronym of a "community ending public ignorance and apathy," launched on June 1st its new television series, St. Croix Valley Liberty Beacons. Based on the type of unfiltered, objective content of global, national, regional and local cable stations, the Liberty Beacons broadcast events, meetings and special presentations of general public interest.

"With this series, we intend to present a true alternative media of 'raw reportage,' on ideas and personalities geared toward free-minds and free-markets, fundamental American values, in fact, that don't get exposure on any national or regional basis in mainstream media," said Tim Krenz, owner of The Cepia Club LLC.

Episode One of Liberty Beacons featured Richard V. Campagna, an attorney who lives in Iowa who spoke at the Libertarian Party of Wisconsin's annual convention in April of this year. Campagna ran for vice president of the United States in 2004. His speech promoted his life's work on "Libertarianism, Existentialism, and Judicial Realism."

As a multi-media business, Cepia Club focuses on raising awareness on the "big" issues that affect people, globally or locally. "Information to be useful has to provide some viable, positive and constructive suggestions for action, by individuals within their communities," Krenz continued. "Most world problems require bottom up solutions—beginning with people, families, and neighborhoods. That's our ideal."

The first episode of Liberty Beacons airs currently on several public access television channels in western Wisconsin and on-demand on-line. Other convention speaker episodes will follow in the coming weeks. For more info on Cepia Club, all 715-646-9933 or visit www.cepiaclub.com.